Failing to receive the support of Governor Gipps for an official expedition, Leichhardt mounted this one with the aid of private subscription. He sailed from Sydney with five companions in August, 1844, and in the Moreton Bay district was joined by four others. Seven of the ten reached Port Essington in December, 1845, completed an overland journey of 3000 miles. On the return to Sydney in March, 1846, the party was rewarded, and greeted with great rejoicing, as it had been regarded as lost. The Journal of the expedition, on which many major streams were discovered, was probably prepared with the help of Dr. William Nicholson.

Four Letters on a Proposed Exploration of the Australian Continent, addressed to Lord Stanley during 1843 & 1844; Transcribed from the originals, with Additions. Adelaide, Sullivan's Cove, 1988. Octavo, pp. 72, papered boards, with dust-wrapper, limited to 135 numbered copies (No. 45). $75

273. Charles STURT. Narrative of an Expedition into Central Australia ... during the years 1844, 5, and 6; Together with a Notice of the Province of South Australia. London, T. and W. Boone, 1849. Two volumes octavo, outer margin of one title-page strengthened, pale stain to the head of one plate, occasional marking : a good uncut set in recent marbled boards and half calf, Ferguson 5202. $2500

In 1844 Sturt set out from Adelaide, with a view to penetrating the centre of the continent and establishing the existence of a mountain range. He followed the Murray River to the Darling, and proceeded up the Darling to the area of Lake Cowandilla. For the first half of 1845 the expedition was confined to the permanent water of Preservation Creek. Later Sturt made several excursions towards the centre of the continent, but was turned back by the sand dunes of the Simpson Desert, and abandoned his conviction that there existed an inland sea. On his return to Adelaide, he found that he had been appointed Colonial Treasurer.

274. Charles STURT. Narrative of an Expedition into Central Australia, Performed ... during the years 1844, 5, and 6 ... Most of the book deals with two overland journeys from the Murrumbidgee to Adelaide, droving cattle, in 1839-1841. This part of his narrative is based closely on diaries kept during the trips, and includes details such as provisioning of the trip, for which Webster was storeman, observations of the countryside, vegetation and native animals, and accounts of open battles and skirmishes with Aborigines, who harassed them most of the way. Webster shows himself to be a keen and sensitive observer of nature and of the Aborigines. Walsh and Hooton 237.
